Grammar for the Exam

Objective: I can use the 7 grammar topics of my exam accurately in Part 2 and in my writing.

G.14.3 Past time (past continuous)

Rule

- Form: was/were + verb-ing (I was studying; they were playing).
- Use it for an action in progress at a moment in the past.
- Use it with the past simple: a longer action was happening when a shorter one interrupted it.
- Use while with the past continuous and when with the past simple.

المضارع الماضي المستمر يصف حدثاً كان مستمراً في وقت معين في الماضي، ويُستخدم مع while.

Examples

- At eight o'clock last night, I was revising for my English test.
- The wind was blowing hard when we left the mall.
- While my roommate was sleeping, I read quietly with a small lamp.
- The students were watching the sky when the first cumulus cloud turned dark.

Common mistakes

✗ I was watch the storm from the window. ✓ I was watching the storm from the window.

✗ When the rain started, we play football. ✓ When the rain started, we were playing football.

✗ They was walking home in the rain. ✓ They were walking home in the rain.

Reading and Gap-fill Skills

Objective: I can use reading strategies to answer multiple-choice questions quickly and accurately.

5 steps for every reading part

1	2	3	4	5
Skim the title and first lines to find the topic and the type of text.	Read the questions first and underline key words.	Scan the text for the key words and read around them carefully.	Check each option, and eliminate the two wrong ones with proof from the text.	Read the text again quickly to check overall meaning before the last question.

Gap-fill parts (Part 1 and Part 2): 5 gaps, 2 marks each

- Read the whole sentence before and after the gap to understand the meaning.
- Decide the part of speech needed (noun, verb or adjective) and check the grammar.
- Read the sentence again with your answer to check it sounds natural; eliminate wrong options.

How the reading marks are shared

Part 3A · 24 marks · 8 questions × 3 marks

Specific information 4×3=12 · Details 2×3=6 · Inference 1×3=3 · Overall meaning 1×3=3

Part 3B · 16 marks · 8 questions × 2 marks

Details 4×2=8 · Inference 1×2=2 · Connection 1×2=2 · Prediction 1×2=2 · Overall meaning 1×2=2

Question types and what to do

Detail	Find the exact sentence in the text and match its meaning; watch for words like not, only and all.
Inference	Use clues around an unknown word and word parts (prefixes, suffixes) to guess its meaning.
Overall	Choose the answer that covers the whole text, not just one paragraph; read the first and last lines.
Connection	Link the text to your own experience or what you know about the world, then pick the logical match.

Writing Skills

Objective: I can write a clear summary and a well-organised reply or opinion text that earns top marks.

1.1 Summary: 15 marks · 1.2 Opinion text: 25 marks

How you are marked

Each criterion is scored from 1 to 5 using the school rubric.

Task completion	5 — Answer every prompt with relevant, developed ideas.
Structure	5 — Paragraphs, topic sentences, correct text type, linking words.
Grammar	5 — A range of simple and complex sentences, mostly accurate.
Vocabulary	5 — Topic words and varied expressions.
Spelling and punctuation	5 — Correct spelling, capitals, commas, apostrophes.

Task 1.1: 3–4 sentences

1. Read the text carefully and underline the main idea in each paragraph.
2. Choose 3 or 4 key ideas and ignore small details and examples.
3. Rewrite each idea in your own words, using synonyms and a different sentence structure.
4. Write 3-4 sentences, check spelling and punctuation, and do not copy sentences.

Task 1.2: at least 150 words

1. Read the question and the three prompts; underline what you must cover.
2. Plan: write your opinion and one reason or example for each prompt.
3. Write paragraph 1: introduction with your opinion; then one paragraph per prompt, each with a topic sentence and a supporting detail.
4. Use linkers, a range of vocabulary and complex grammar such as relative clauses.
5. Write a conclusion, reach at least 150 words, and check spelling, punctuation and grammar.

Sharing Made Simple

In many cities today, young adults are choosing to share things rather than own them. Sharing a flat is the most common example. In Abu Dhabi, a one-bedroom apartment in the centre can cost more than a new graduate earns in a month, so two or three people often split the rent. Housemates also share the bills for water, electricity and internet, which makes everyday life much cheaper.

Money, however, is only one reason. Housemates meet people from different backgrounds, and they often learn new languages and customs without leaving home. Hassan, an engineer from Jordan, shares a flat with two colleagues from India and Egypt. "Every Friday we cook a dish from our own countries," he says. "In one year I have learned more about food and music than in ten years of travelling."

Sharing also works beyond the home. Car-sharing apps allow neighbours to use the same vehicle at different times, which reduces traffic and parking problems. Some communities have tool libraries, where residents borrow drills, ladders or sewing machines for a small fee instead of buying equipment they will use only twice a year.

Of course, sharing needs clear rules. Experts advise housemates to agree on a cleaning schedule, quiet hours and a system for paying bills before they move in. Most arguments begin with small things, such as dirty plates or guests arriving late, and they grow when nobody talks honestly. A simple weekly chat can solve most problems before they become serious. With respect and good communication, sharing can save money, protect the environment and create friendships that last for years.

1. How does the cost of a one-bedroom apartment in central Abu Dhabi compare with a new graduate's income?

(A) It is about the same as one month's income
(B) It can be higher than one month's income
(C) It is always much lower than one month's income

2. What does the word 'split' mean in 'split the rent'?

(A) Break into small pieces
(B) Increase the price of
(C) Divide and pay together

Weather and the Body

People have always joked about feeling "under the weather", but scientists now take the connection between climate and health seriously. Rapid changes in temperature, for example, force the body to work harder to keep its internal balance. In the Gulf, where summer temperatures regularly exceed forty-five degrees, hospitals report a noticeable rise in cases of dehydration and heat exhaustion between June and September.

Humidity makes the problem worse. When the air is already full of moisture, sweat evaporates slowly, so the body cannot cool itself efficiently. Doctors therefore advise outdoor workers to drink water regularly, wear loose cotton clothing and take breaks in shaded areas, even if they do not feel thirsty. Thirst, they warn, is often a late signal rather than an early one.

Cold weather brings different risks. Winter in colder countries is associated with more respiratory infections, partly because people spend more time indoors, where viruses spread easily. Some researchers also link shorter daylight hours to low mood, a condition sometimes called seasonal affective disorder, although the evidence is still being debated.

Climate change is adding a further layer of uncertainty. More frequent heatwaves and unpredictable storms put pressure on emergency services, and vulnerable groups such as elderly people and young children are affected first. Consequently, many cities are investing in early-warning systems, public cooling centres and awareness campaigns. Individuals can also contribute by checking the forecast, protecting their families and looking after neighbours who live alone. Preparation, experts insist, is far cheaper than recovery.

1. What do hospitals in the Gulf report during the hottest months?

(A) Fewer patients than in winter
(B) More cases of dehydration and heat exhaustion
(C) A rise in cold-weather infections

2. Why does high humidity make hot weather more dangerous?

(A) Sweat evaporates slowly, so the body cools badly
(B) The air becomes colder at night
(C) People drink too much water

Subject: My trip to Fujairah

Hi Mansour,

How are you? I hope your exams went well. I'm writing because I've just come back from a week with my uncle's family in Fujairah, and I need to tell someone about it!

Last year, I was sure that summer was the best season because I love swimming and staying up late. However, this trip changed my mind a little. We went camping on the beach in December. During the day the weather was perfect, not too hot, and we played football and fished with my cousins. In the evening we made a fire, and my uncle told us stories about life in the desert long ago. One night a strong wind arrived, and we had to move our tents behind some rocks. It was cold, but it was also very funny!

My mother says people must prepare carefully for every season. In summer you have to drink plenty of water, and in winter you need warm clothes for the evenings.

Which season do you prefer, and why? Do you have any special memories of a season? Write soon!

Best wishes, Yousef

Text: “My trip to Fujairah” from Yousef

Task 1.1 model (15 marks)

Yousef is writing to tell Mansour about a camping trip he took with his uncle's family in Fujairah. He used to think that summer was the best season, but the cool weather and the activities on the beach changed his opinion a little. One night a strong wind arrived, so they had to move their tents, which turned out to be funny. His mother believes that people must prepare for every season.

Task 1.2 model (25 marks)

Hi Yousef,

Thanks for your email. It sounds like you had a wonderful trip! Personally, I think the cooler season is much better than the hot season in the UAE.

First of all, the cooler months give us many chances to enjoy the outdoors. Last January, my family and I were walking in the mountains near Hatta when it started to rain. We ran into a small cave, which was the only place that stayed dry, and we drank hot tea while we watched the water run down the rocks. It was the best day of my year, and I will never forget it.

Secondly, the hot season can be difficult and even dangerous. In summer the temperature often rises above forty-five degrees, and the high humidity near the coast makes it harder to breathe. For this reason, people must drink plenty of water, wear light clothes and avoid working outside at midday. Otherwise, they can suffer from heat exhaustion, which is hazardous to health.

In conclusion, I prefer the cooler season because it is more comfortable and safer. Which season do you like best? Write back soon!

Best wishes,
Mansour

Share the Ride, Share the Cost

Every morning, thousands of cars enter the centre of Dubai carrying only one person. Traffic experts say that this habit is the main reason for long queues, noisy streets and polluted air. A simple answer is carpooling, a system in which people who travel along the same route use one car and share the petrol costs.

Carpooling began during the 1970s, when fuel prices rose sharply and governments asked people to save energy. Today mobile apps make it much easier. A driver enters his route and departure time, and the app suggests passengers who live nearby. Most apps also show profiles and ratings, so users can choose companions they trust. A typical group of four saves about 800 dirhams a month compared with driving alone.

Sharing is not limited to cars. In some neighbourhoods, families keep a community shed that contains lawnmowers, ladders and pressure washers. Members pay a small annual fee and book what they need online. Engineers calculate that an ordinary drill is used for less than fifteen minutes in its whole life, so buying one for every home is wasteful.

Of course, sharing needs trust and good organisation. Carpool groups usually agree on pick-up times, and anyone who is late more than twice may lose his place. Tool sheds ask borrowers to clean items before returning them. When everyone follows the rules, the benefits are clear: lower costs, cleaner air and more contact between neighbours, who might otherwise never speak to each other.

1. What do traffic experts blame for long queues and polluted air?

(A) Cars carrying only one person
(B) Too many buses
(C) Poor road signs

2. Why did carpooling begin in the 1970s?

(A) Mobile apps were invented
(B) Fuel prices rose sharply
(C) New roads were built

Dust, Pressure and the Human Body

Many people claim that they can predict rain because their joints ache or their head feels heavy. For decades doctors dismissed such stories as superstition. Recent studies, however, suggest that changes in atmospheric pressure may indeed affect some people, particularly those who suffer from migraines or arthritis. A fall in pressure before a storm is thought to cause tissues in the body to expand slightly, which can irritate sensitive nerves.

Dust is a more obvious hazard. During a severe dust storm, tiny particles travel hundreds of kilometres and enter the lungs, where they can trigger asthma attacks and breathing problems. Hospitals in the Gulf often report a surge of patients on such days. Health authorities therefore recommend that vulnerable residents stay indoors, keep windows closed and wear a mask if they must go outside. Interestingly, a damp cloth over the nose offers little protection compared with a proper filter mask.

Sleep is another casualty of extreme weather. Warm nights prevent the body from lowering its core temperature, which is essential for deep rest, and studies in several countries show that sleep quality falls as nights become hotter. Poor sleep, in turn, weakens concentration and the immune system, creating a cycle that is difficult to break.

None of this means that weather is a sentence to illness. Humans adapt remarkably well: after two weeks in a hot climate, the body sweats earlier and loses less salt. Nevertheless, adaptation has limits, and scientists warn that rising temperatures could soon push some regions beyond what the body can tolerate without technology such as air conditioning. Understanding these limits, they argue, is the first step towards designing healthier cities.

1. Why did doctors reject stories about aching joints for many years?

Ⓐ They thought the stories were superstition
Ⓑ They had no hospitals
Ⓒ They believed the weather was always the same

2. How might a fall in pressure cause pain, according to the text?

Ⓐ It makes the blood colder
Ⓑ Tissues may expand and irritate sensitive nerves
Ⓒ It causes people to sleep too much

Subject: Big news!

Hi Hamdan,

I hope you're well. I have some big news: my cousin Rashid and I are planning to rent a flat together near his university in Sharjah next year, and we will share it with two other students. My parents are worried, but I'm very excited about it!

I think it will be a great experience. We will split the rent, so it will be much cheaper than living alone, and we can cook together and help each other with our studies. Rashid is tidy, but I'm not sure about the other boys. One of them stays up very late, and the other one plays loud music. I have also never washed my own clothes or paid a bill!

My uncle says that every shared flat needs clear rules about cleaning, noise and money, and I agree with him.

Do you think sharing a flat is a good idea for students? Would you be ready to try it? Tell me what you think.

Your friend, Fahad

Review Exam 2: Answer Key and Model Answers

Mark your paper. Green = correct answer. Read each reason. Then compare your writing with the model.

Part 1 · Vocabulary (2 marks each)

The (1) climate of the United Arab Emirates is hot and dry for most of the year, so people have found clever ways to stay comfortable. A traditional kandura is made from a light cotton (2) fabric, which lets air move around the body. White is the most popular colour because it can (3) reflect the sun's rays, while dark colours take in the heat and make the wearer feel much hotter. In summer, the (4) temperature often rises above forty-five degrees, and spending long hours outside without a hat can be (5) hazardous to health. For this reason, workers drink plenty of water and rest in the shade at midday. Many families also choose homes with thick walls and small windows, which keep the inside cool without using too much electricity. Modern designers are now studying these old ideas to create sports clothes that protect athletes from the sun and help them perform well in hot conditions.

1	B	Climate is the usual weather of a country over a long time.
2	A	A fabric is a type of cloth, such as cotton.
3	C	White colours reflect (send back) sunlight, so the body stays cooler.
4	B	Temperature is how hot or cold something is, and it can rise above 45 degrees.
5	A	Hazardous means dangerous.

Part 2 · Grammar (2 marks each)

I was very nervous on my first day at a new school in Al Ain last September. (1) However, the boys in my class were friendly, and I soon felt better. During the first break, while I (2) was eating my sandwich alone, a boy called Saeed sat down next to me and asked where I came from. We talked about our hobbies, and I told him I (3) could play football quite well, so he invited me to join the school team. After every practice, we enjoyed (4) talking about our favourite players on the way home. Saeed also introduced me to other students, and soon I had a small group of friends who shared my interests. Now he is one of my closest friends, and school feels much (5) more enjoyable than it did before. My father always says that a new place becomes a home when you meet good people there, and I agree with him completely.

Text: “Big news!” from Fahad

Task 1.1 model (15 marks)

Fahad is writing to tell Hamdan that he and his cousin plan to share a flat with two other students near a university in Sharjah. He is excited because the rent will be cheaper and they can help each other, but his parents are worried. He is also unsure about his flatmates' habits and has never paid a bill himself. He asks Hamdan whether he thinks it is a good idea.

Task 1.2 model (25 marks)

Hi Fahad,

Thanks for your news. Congratulations on your plan! In my opinion, sharing a flat with other students is a good idea, as long as everyone follows clear rules.

The main benefits are money and friendship. First of all, you can split the rent and the bills, so you have more money for books and trips. Moreover, you will meet people who come from different cities and countries, and you can learn a lot from them. For example, my cousin shares a flat in Abu Dhabi and he has already learned two new recipes!

However, living together can create problems. If one person plays loud music or never cleans the kitchen, the others will get angry quickly. To avoid this, the flatmates should make a cleaning schedule and agree on quiet hours before they move in. In addition, they must respect each other's privacy and talk honestly if something is wrong.

Finally, I think I would be ready to share a flat next year. I already help my mother with the cooking, and I can manage my time well. Good luck with the flat, and please tell me how it goes!

Best wishes,
Hamdan
