The Returns Desk

Every big shop in Abu Dhabi has a returns desk, and the one at Al Noor Mall is my favourite to describe. It is on the ground floor, next to the customer service point, and it opens at ten o'clock every morning. Above the desk there is a large blue sign that says 'Returns and Exchanges'.

Last Saturday my brother Salem went there with a pair of football boots. He had bought them online ten days earlier, but they were a size too small. The assistant, a friendly young woman, asked him to show the receipt and the original box. Salem had kept both, which was lucky, because the shop's rule says that every product must be returned within fourteen days. Items without a receipt can only be exchanged for a gift card, not for money.

The assistant checked the boots carefully. She looked for dirt, scratches and damaged laces. Then she offered two choices: a bigger pair of the same brand, or a full refund to his credit card. Salem chose the refund, because he wanted to buy a different brand with better quality. The money would return to his account within five working days, she explained, and she printed a new receipt as proof.

Salem left the desk smiling. He told me that the process was so smooth that he would happily shop there again. Many customers feel nervous about returning things, but a clear policy and a polite assistant can make it simple.

1. Where is the returns desk at Al Noor Mall?

(A) On the first floor, near the cinema
(B) On the ground floor, next to the customer service point
(C) On the ground floor, next to the main entrance

2. What was the problem with Salem's football boots?

(A) They were damaged
(B) They were the wrong colour
(C) They were too small

3. Why was Salem lucky?

(A) He still had the receipt and the box
(B) He arrived before the shop opened
(C) He had paid by credit card

More Than Intelligence

Many students believe that success at college depends mainly on intelligence. However, research suggests that habits matter far more than natural ability. Students who plan their time carefully, attend every lecture and ask questions regularly usually achieve higher grades than those who rely on talent alone.

One of the most important skills is time management. At school, teachers remind students about homework and exams. At college, professors expect learners to be independent and responsible for their own progress. A student who keeps a weekly timetable, for instance, can balance lectures, assignments and rest without feeling overwhelmed.

Another key factor is cooperation. Universities provide tutors, libraries and study groups, but these facilities are useful only if students actually use them. Working with classmates helps learners to understand difficult topics from different perspectives, and explaining an idea to a friend is often the best way to remember it. Moreover, living with people from various backgrounds teaches tolerance and communication, qualities that employers value highly.

Finally, successful students look after their health. Sleeping for seven or eight hours, eating regular meals and taking short breaks while studying improve concentration considerably. Some students stay awake all night before an exam, but studies show that this strategy usually backfires, since a tired brain cannot recall information efficiently.

In short, college rewards those who combine discipline with curiosity and cooperation, rather than those who simply hope to be gifted.

1. According to the text, who usually gets higher grades?

(A) Students with good habits such as planning and asking questions
(B) Students with the highest natural intelligence
(C) Students who study every night until morning

2. What do professors expect from college students?

(A) To follow reminders about homework
(B) To work only in groups
(C) To be independent and responsible for their progress

(B) They replace lectures and tutors
(C) They are cheaper than libraries

(A) A boy reads a chapter three times and forgets it
(B) A boy teaches his cousin a maths rule and then remembers it much better
(C) A boy copies his friend's homework before class

Subject: My first month at college

Hi Khalid,

How are you? I hope you and your family are well. Sorry I haven't written for a while, but the first month at college has been extremely busy!

I'm living in a student residence near the main campus, and I share a room with a boy from Oman called Saif. He's friendly and we often study together in the library. My classes are quite different from school. Each professor gives us a lot of reading, and we have to hand in assignments every week. At first I felt lost, but my tutor helped me to make a study timetable, which has made life much easier.

On Thursday there's an open day for future students, and I think you should come. You could see the facilities, such as the sports hall and the computer labs, and meet some of the teachers. Do you think you could come with your dad?

Tell me about your school and what you want to study after graduation.

Best wishes, Omar

Task 1.1 model (15 marks)

Omar is writing to tell Khalid about his first month at college. He lives in a residence with a friend called Saif, and he has professors who give a lot of weekly assignments, but his tutor helped him to organise his time. He invites Khalid to visit the open day on Thursday and asks about Khalid's school and plans.

Task 1.2 model (25 marks)

Hi Omar,

Thank you for your email. It was great to hear from you! I'm really happy that you are enjoying your new life at college. My school life is quite busy too. I usually arrive at seven o'clock, and we have six lessons every day. My favourite subject is science because the experiments are fun and our teacher explains everything clearly. However, I'm not looking forward to the exams next month.

I would love to come to the open day on Thursday. If my father is free, we will drive to your campus together. I want to see the facilities, especially the computer labs, because I would like to study engineering in the future. Also, I want to find out what a normal day at college is like.

I have a few questions for you. How many hours do you study every day? And is it difficult to make new friends when you live in a student residence? Please tell me if you have time to show me the library.

Please say hello to Saif from me. Best wishes,
Khalid

A Faulty Tablet

The customer service centre at Desert Gadgets is a bright, busy room on the second floor of Marina Mall. Behind a long white counter, four staff members wear green shirts and name badges. On the wall there is a clock and a large poster listing the shop's three promises: fast service, honest advice and fair refunds.

On Friday afternoon, a young man called Yousef arrived with a tablet that he had bought three weeks earlier. The screen kept turning black without warning. He was annoyed, but he stayed calm and spoke politely. The assistant, Mr Karim, listened carefully and then tested the tablet for ten minutes. 'It is clearly faulty,' he said. 'You are entitled to a replacement or your money back.'

Yousef had lost the paper receipt, which worried him. Fortunately, the shop keeps a digital copy of every purchase made with a loyalty card, and Yousef's name was in the system. Mr Karim found the details in seconds. According to the shop's policy, faulty products can be returned within thirty days, but customers who simply change their minds have only seven days.

In the end, Yousef asked for a replacement, since the tablet was his birthday present from his uncle and he liked its design. Mr Karim brought a new one from the storeroom, checked that it worked and asked Yousef to sign a short form. The whole visit lasted only twenty minutes. As Yousef walked out, he said it was the best service he had ever received.

Starting College Life

Moving away from home to attend college is one of the biggest changes in a young person's life. Many students arrive full of excitement, yet within weeks they discover that independence brings unexpected challenges. Understanding these challenges in advance makes it much easier to overcome them.

The first difficulty is usually homesickness. Students who are used to family meals and familiar streets may feel isolated on a crowded campus. Psychologists recommend joining clubs or sports teams during the first month, since shared activities create friendships faster than casual conversation. In many universities, older students also volunteer as mentors, offering advice about courses and campus life.

A second challenge is the style of teaching. School lessons are often structured around textbooks, whereas college lectures encourage debate and critical thinking. Professors rarely give a single correct answer; instead, they expect students to support their opinions with evidence. Learners who are reluctant to speak in seminars may find their grades suffering, so it is wise to prepare a question for every session.

Finally, money management causes more stress than most newcomers expect. Tuition, books and transportation can quickly exhaust a monthly allowance. Students who record their expenses in a notebook or an app are far less likely to run out of money before the end of the month.

Although these problems seem serious, they are temporary. With patience, planning and support from others, most students adapt within a semester and discover that college has made them more confident and mature.

1. What does 'isolated' mean in paragraph 2?

(A) Very famous
(B) Alone and separate from others
(C) Extremely tired

2. What do psychologists recommend in the first month?

(A) Joining clubs or sports teams
(B) Calling home every day
(C) Avoiding casual conversation

Hi Majid,

How are you? I hope your exams went well. I'm writing because I need your advice about something that happened last week.

I ordered a sports watch from a website called TimeZone. The price was great, and the reviews said the quality was excellent, so I paid by credit card straight away. The parcel arrived after four days, but there are two problems. First, the watch is black, not blue as I chose. Second, the strap feels cheap, and it broke when I tried it on! I still have the receipt and the packaging.

The website says I can return items within fourteen days, but I would have to pay a delivery fee of fifteen dirhams. I'm not sure whether to ask for a refund or an exchange. I really wanted a blue one.

Have you ever had a problem with an online order? Also, what do you usually check before you buy something on the internet?

Review Exam 2: Answer Key and Model Answers

Mark your paper. Green = correct answer. Read each reason. Then compare your writing with the model.

Part 1 · Vocabulary (2 marks each)

Shopping has changed a lot in the last few years. Today, many people prefer to (1) browse online for clothes and gadgets instead of walking around crowded malls. When they find something they like, they compare the price and read about the (2) quality of the product before buying it. Some shoppers only choose well-known (3) brands such as Nike or Samsung, because they trust them. They usually pay by credit card, and if the item does not fit, they can (4) exchange it for a different size, as long as they keep the receipt. Some websites also charge a small (5) fee for delivery. A recent survey at our school showed that most students shop online at least once a month, and experts make a prediction that this number will keep growing. My father also prefers it, because he can compare many shops quickly, save time after work and avoid the heavy traffic around the mall.

Text: “I need your advice” from Rashid

Task 1.1 model (15 marks)

Rashid is asking Majid for advice about a problem with an online order. The brand new sports watch arrived in the wrong colour and the strap broke, and the website charges a fee for returns. He does not know whether to ask for a refund or an exchange, and he asks Majid about his own experience.

Task 1.2 model (25 marks)

Hi Rashid,

Thanks for your email. I'm sorry to hear about your watch! In my opinion, you should ask for an exchange. You really wanted a blue one, so a refund would not solve your problem. Also, the strap broke, which means the quality is poor, although the price was good. If I were you, I would send an email to the shop today and keep the receipt.

I had a similar experience last year. I ordered a football shirt online, but it was too small. I wrote to the website, and they let me exchange it for a larger size, which was free because the mistake was theirs. As a result, I now read the return rules before I pay.

Next time, you should check a few things. First, read the reviews and compare the brands. Then, look at the return policy, because some shops charge a fee. Please tell me what happens!

Best wishes,
Majid
